

SGA CEO sounds upbeat on back on impressive growth

As the month of March (a hectic month for enterprises work-wise and accounting-wise) zips into the sunset and a new financial year greets us, there is a sense of overwhelming optimism at SGA. We, at SGA, are swelled with pride at the immense heights SGA has reached over the last twelve months or so. The first few days of April have provided an opportunity to reflect on what we have accomplished.

Of course, ‘business challenges’ will always be there and there will be also ‘ways’ to tide over it, provided things are executed in a desired manner. We, at SGA, have invariably found the right mechanism in offering client delight through our cost-effective services. We have not only achieved consistent progress with our existing clients but also added various new clients (FTE and ad-hoc projects) over the same period.

SGA puts high focus on ‘delivering nothing but the best’ – our stupendous growth journey clearly would not have been possible without the unflinching commitment and perseverance of our hugely talented 600-odd workforce. Our vibrant work environment always serves as a catalyst for our employees to keep our diverse clients happy.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all and sundry for their efforts in making SGA a force to reckon with. As we eagerly look forward to the appraisal month, I would want our employees to engage in some soul-searching and see for themselves where they stand career-wise. I am fully confident that many success stories will be written in the coming months and resultantly, SGA will clamber new corporate ladders.